Safe. Convenient. Reimbursable.

As a patient on Coumadin® (Warfarin), you know the importance of regular PT/INR testing to ensure your PT/INR values are within therapeutic range. But here's something you may not know: Many patients receiving anticoagulation therapy test themselves in the comfort of their own home – even at work or on vacation!

Self-testing is safe and convenient for you, and it gives your physician more frequent test results to help guide the course of your treatment.

ACS PT/INR At-Home Monitoring Service

ACS offers this complete and easy self-testing service, as ordered by your physician.

ACS supplies everything you need including:

- A small, convenient testing device
- All necessary testing supplies
- Face-to-face training designed to help you successfully test your PT/INR value

ACS will coordinate with Medicare or your private insurer to determine your eligibility for reimbursement so you don't have to worry about it.

Getting Started

Once you and your physician decide that PT/INR self-testing is right for you, ACS takes care of the rest in four easy steps:

1

Insurance Verification

Once your physician orders home testing, your insurance company(s) will be contacted to determine the extent of your coverage and your responsibility for any deductibles and/or co-payments.

2

Training You on the PT/INR Testing Device

Next, face-to-face training will be provided on the convenient, palm-sized testing device.

3

Sending You Supplies

The required test strips will be mailed to you, and any defective devices will be replaced.

4

Support

ACS is available to answer your questions and provide ongoing technical support.

How It Works

After each at-home test you will report the results to ACS by calling 800-231-2290. ACS will send those results to your physician immediately for timely review. Then your physician will discuss any changes in treatment directly with you.
